The military mind necessarily views these two battles with a different eye, from that of the ordinary observer, for the simple reason that it looks through the medium of military knowledge. through the medium of military knowledge. It sees virtues and excellencies, where the It sees virtues and excellences, where the civil mind can see none. Hence, the opinion of Wellington is worth a hundred opinions of civilians. The result of these of law. The following paragraph from the hattles, every body saw and felt at the time. Richmond Times of yesterday, will give It was the prelude to the destruction of Mexi-

at Beena Vista.

This day, three years ago! What a theme! How crowded in a brief space, are events, which, in the usual course of things, it would take a century to evolve! The morning sun of the 8th of May, eighteen hundred and forty-six, rose upon a battle, whose victor was straightway to march to the Chief Magistracy of his country. Four fiery ordeals were in reserve for him. He passed through them all, terrible, soul-trying as they were, and lo! the Presidency of a mighty people is his teward. Perhaps there is no instance in human affairs, in which one of God's creatures has so suddenly risen from the quiet walks of life to the pinnacle of this world's greatness. Fortunately for the fame of the Hero of this scene, fortunately for the cause of human virtue, the lot fell upon a man, whose head this sudden transition has not turped, does not seem ca-
